Agreement on the assignment of exploitation rights

1. The agreement on the assignment of exploitation rights is concluded between the Swiss Journal of Social Work (SJSW) and the authors of an article.

By submitting the article, the authors agree to the terms of this agreement.

Until the definitive version of the article has been approved, the agreement may be terminated at any time if the authors or the journal decide against publishing the article in the SJSW. Notice of termination must be given in writing by email or via the journal's platform.

2. The authors assure that

- they are authorised to enter into this agreement in relation to the contribution they have submitted.
- the contribution is an original work, has not yet been published and is not currently submitted for publication or evaluation anywhere else.
- the submission of the article for publication to the SJSW does not conflict with any other contracts or obligations to which the authors are bound.
- no third-party copyright or usage rights are infringed.
- Material taken from third-party works (quotations, images, diagrams, etc.) or from your own publications is clearly identified as such and the necessary permissions have been obtained from the rights holders
- the data presented in the article have been collected using correctly declared and scientifically recognised methods.
- the necessary permissions for the publication of the material have been obtained.

3. The authors agree that

- the decision on whether to initiate the review process and on whether to accept a manuscript for publication or to reject it lies with the editorial board of the SJSW.
- The title and abstract are included with the requests sent to potential reviewers, and if they agree to review the paper, they will receive the full anonymised manuscript and the accompanying materials.
- Authors and reviewers remain anonymous to one another during the review process (double-blind peer review).
- the contributions are assessed by two independent experts.
- they receive an anonymised extract from the reviews.
- the article may be subject to a further review if a recommendation is made that it be revised.
- when resubmitting the revised article, they must include a statement explaining how the reviewers' and editorial team's criticisms and suggestions have been taken into account.
- Changes to the layout and other editorial amendments (spelling and grammar corrections) are made.
- they will validate the final version of the article once more before publication.
- if the article is accepted for publication, it will be published by the SJSW as open access under a CC-BY 4.0 licence.

After the initial publication in the SJSW the articles can be copied and redistributed in any medium or format for any purpose, even commercially. The articles can be remixed, transformed, and built upon for any purpose, even commercially.

Under the following terms: You must give appropriate credit, provide a link to the license, and indicate if changes were made. You may do so in any reasonable manner, but not in any way that suggests the licensor endorses you or your use. You may not apply legal terms or technological measures that legally restrict others from doing anything the license permits.

https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/

4. For the purpose of publishing the article in the SJSW as open access under a CC-BY 4.0 licence

- By submitting their article the authors grant the SJSW the non-exclusive right to use the article without any restrictions as to duration, medium, format, languages or any other restrictions.
- the authors grant all readers, in advance and in perpetuity, the right to read and redistribute the article free of charge, provided that the authorship is clearly indicated and acknowledged.

09.03.2023